

Getting back to Life

After months of suffering from a condition called Bell's Palsy, Wanda Ardoin was sent to the Therapy Center of Jennings by her physician to see if therapy could provide a solution to the sudden weakness in the muscles on the right side of her face.

From the moment Ms. Ardoin entered the Therapy Center, she knew she was with people who truly cared about her quality of life. "I was warmly welcomed, treated with the utmost respect, and my treatment plan was thoroughly explained to me prior to being performed," claimed Ms. Ardoin.

Ms. Ardoin's road to recovery was not an easy one. After 6 therapy treatments with a team of physical and speech therapists, Ms. Ardoin made tremendous progress. Her treatment consisted of electrical stimulation to improve the temporary paralysis caused by Bell's Palsy as well as dry needling and massage for headaches that were caused by her Bell's Palsy.

"My life is back to normal! The facial paralysis is gone, my eye now blinks, the headaches are substantially better, and my mouth moves equally on both sides!"

The road to recovery can be difficult, but it doesn't have to be traveled alone. Therapy Center offers the best in rehabilitative services in a variety of settings including outpatient rehabilitation, home health and nursing home services.
